Hop Hoops
The pace of a regular basketball game slows down, but the challenge goes up when every player must hop instead of run. Hop on two feet, right foot, or left foot while dribbling the basketball. Your team just made a shot? Now everyone hop back down the court!

Basket Disk
Grab a disk and head to the court. Designate certain spots two-, three-, and four-point zones. Let the disk soar and hit the basket from any of these zones to earn the same number of points. Defensive blocks and stealing allowed.

Basket Dash
What would basketball be without all that dribbling? Basket Dash! Run as fast as you can, but don't be a ball hog. Keep your teammates on the go with you — each side must pass at least six times before shooting. Keep your arms and legs on the move.

Jumping Hoops
Play a standard game of "HORSE" with one addition: every letter you make you must jump rope 20 times before shooting the next letter. Miss a letter? Now you must jump rope 30 times while the other player shoots.

Baseketball
Place four "bases" around the basketball court. The batter is the same as a passer in Baseketball. Pass or throw the basketball as far as you can, all the way to the outfield, run the bases before the opposing team member catches the ball and makes a basket. First team to score gets the point.

Go Wild
Land on Go Wild and students can create something new to play. Combine basketball with your favorite activity or sport. Take your shot!

Birdbasket Ball
Don't be a birdbrain, basketball's a whole new game when using a racket and birdie! Volley with your teammates, avoiding interference from opponents' rackets. Keep it under control and you'll shoot the birdie through the hoop for the regulation 2 points.

Hoop It Up
Your ball is a basketball. Your basket is a hoop that moves. Have two players hold the hoop flat, like the rim of a basket. You can't control these human hoops. They run around the court as much as you do. If you can get close enough, shoot through the hoop to score.

End Zone Hoops
Defend your basket as though it's the end zone. Play football on the basketball court, which means running and passing with a football instead of dribbling. Once the offense gets near enough to a basket to shoot, any attempt is allowed. Defensive players jump up to block. If the opponent scores, head back the other way.

Putt-Putt Hoops
Set up a putt-putt course around the basketball court. Make basketball fast holes is in the fea-than-zero zone. Use your club get the ball to the hole. Take a shot with your lightweight putt-putt golf ball. Hole-in-one, anyone?

Hockeyball
Hockey sticks and a lightweight ball add a new dimension to the game of basketball. Using a small rubber ball, dribble and pass with your hockey stick down the court. Once you're in shooting range, bench the stick and shoot the ball the old-fashioned way.

Dribbleball
There's dribbling in this game, but it's done with your feet. Using a soccer ball, dribble and pass the ball to your teammates as you move up the court. When it's time to go for a basket, stop, grab, and shoot! Hands are only allowed for scoring.

Volley Hoop
Using a volleyball instead of a basketball, "bump and set" your way down the court. Up off with a set from center court, passing through or passing allowed in this version of basketball. A very high set or bump will make it through the hoop, so aim carefully and make sure you're in the zone.

Kung Fu Ball
A basketball game with martial arts skills looks like this: every player who does not have the ball must bust a move. A kung fu kick, a punch, a karate chop – keep the defense on the move. These are for fun, not contact.

Hoopscotch
The court looks a little different when you tape hopscotch squares down on the paint. Pick a square, dribble down to it, and take a shot from where you score that number of points. Then hop your way through the remaining squares to complete the play.

Basket-Tag
A game of tag on the court when every player on the basketball court is dribbling a ball of this skill while the player who is "it" pursues while dribbling a ball of their own.
