PUBLIC COMMENT FORM

A primary concern with the EHR is in controlling access to individual patient information. Often with EHR systems, any individual who has access to the host information system can pull any patient's information without regard as to whether or not they are treating or have a legitimate medical need for this information. Such uncontrolled access not only violates patient privacy laws, but would not be possible or tolerated with paper records. Therefore, I strongly recommend that regardless as to whatever national EHR system is implemented, that restrictions be placed upon who can access individual patient information and regular tracking of who accesses the individual patient's information be mandatory! Optimally, EHR's should be S10K products as well.
