Voice Over: [0:05] The main thing that keeps me up at night, is the thought of the unknown that could lead to pandemics.

Voice over is shown to be the Director of the Center for Global Health, Dr. Rebecca Martin

Rebecca Martin: [0:12] We have to build a trained, well-equipped workforce before there is a crisis. Trying to do that in the middle of a crisis does not work.

Video of frontline health workers teaching about handwashing are shown

Rebecca Martin V.O.: [0:22] Health care workers are part of that public health workforce. It’s very important that we think about that frontline worker.

Video of health workers talking to patients in a clinic

Rebecca Martin V.O.: [0:30] We need health workers to be out in the communities. We need them to be engaged on a daily basis. And if those relationships are built, if there’s already community engagement, we will be able to go in and stop diseases more rapidly and faster than when we don’t.

Test on the screen: Empower and champion health workers worldwide.

Logos for the United Nations Foundation, Johnson & Johnson, and the Frontline Health Workers Coalition are shown.

Disclaimer at the bottom reads, “The use of images from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) does not imply the endorsement of any organization of the information contained herein by the CDC.”