A healthy diet is important for everyone, even your pets! When picking out the right food for your pet, there are important things to consider.

Raw pet foods can make pets and people sick
CDC does not recommend feeding raw diets to pets.

Germs like Salmonella and Listeria bacteria have been found in raw pet foods, even packaged ones sold in stores. These germs can make your pets sick. Your family also can get sick by handling the raw food or by taking care of your pet.

What about dry and canned pet food?
Dry and canned pet food also can be contaminated with germs. Before making any changes to your pet’s diet, talk with your veterinarian.

Tips to stay healthy while feeding your pet
Always wash your hands with soap and water right after handling pet food or treats; this is the most important step to prevent illness.

Clean and disinfect all surfaces that the raw food touched, like countertops, microwaves, refrigerators and objects like knives, spoons, or mops.

If you decide to feed your pet raw food

Wash your hands and surfaces thoroughly after handling raw pet food.

- Freeze raw pet food until you are ready to use it.
- Keep raw pet food away from other food in your refrigerator or freezer.
- Don’t thaw frozen raw pet foods on a countertop or in a sink.
- Throw away any food your pet doesn’t eat.

Safely store and handle raw pet food.

- Wash your hands with soap and water right after handling any raw pet food.
- If you decide to feed your pet raw food, wash your hands and surfaces thoroughly after handling raw pet food.
- Always wash your hands with soap and water after handling frozen or live feeder rodents.
- Thaw frozen feeder rodents in a dedicated container out of the kitchen.
- Never feed wild rodents to your pet.

Children and pets
- Young children are at risk for illness because their immune systems are still developing and because they are more likely than others to put their fingers or other items into their mouths.
- Children younger than 5 years old should not touch or eat pet food, treats, or supplements.
- Adults should supervise young children when washing hands.
