Marijuana use during pregnancy can be harmful to your baby’s health. The chemicals in marijuana (in particular, tetrahydrocannabinol or THC) pass through your system to your baby and can negatively affect your baby’s development.1–7

Although more research is needed to better understand how marijuana may affect you and your baby during pregnancy, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommends against using marijuana during your pregnancy.

What you need to know about marijuana use and pregnancy

Fast Facts

• Using marijuana during pregnancy may increase your baby’s risk of developmental problems.1–7
• About one in 25 women in the U.S. reports using marijuana while pregnant.8
• The chemicals in any form of marijuana may be bad for your baby—this includes edible marijuana products (such as cookies, brownies, or candies).9
• If you’re using marijuana and are pregnant or are planning to become pregnant, talk to your doctor.

Can using marijuana during my pregnancy negatively impact my baby after birth?

• Research shows marijuana use during pregnancy may make it hard for your child to pay attention or to learn, these issues may only become noticeable as your child grows older.1–7

Does using marijuana affect breastfeeding?

• Chemicals from marijuana can be passed to your baby through breast milk. THC is stored in fat and is slowly released over time, meaning an infant could be exposed for a longer period of time.
• However, data on the effects of marijuana exposure to the infant through breastfeeding are limited and conflicting.
• To limit potential risk to the infant, breastfeeding mothers should reduce or avoid marijuana use.11,14–16
