

MEDICATION FOR ATTENTION-DEFICIT/HYPERACTIVITY DISORDER

Children with ADHD may have behavior problems that lead to trouble with family, friends and at school.

Medication can help a child with ADHD in their everyday life.

In 2011-2012, 7 in 10 children (69%) with a current diagnosis of ADHD* were taking medication for ADHD.

Behavior therapy can also be a helpful part of treatment.

These children were reported by a parent as having ADHD at the time of the survey.*
