Randy Lewis is senior vice president of Supply Chain and Logistics for Walgreens in Deerfield, Illinois. Lewis was instrumental in introducing a new concept to Walgreens that would transform the company's distribution centers and employment opportunities. Walgreens' two most recent distribution centers employ an inclusive and integrated workforce composed of 40% of persons with disabilities, who are held to the same work standards and earn the same pay as "typically-abled" fellow workers. As a result of this success of serving both shareholders and the community, Walgreens has set a new goal to fill more than 20% of its entire workforce with persons with disabilities.
