The US Department of Health and Human Services continues its long-standing dedication to improving the health and wellness of all Americans. Programs administered and supported by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention include Partnerships to Improve Community Health (PICH), National Implementation and Dissemination for Chronic Disease Prevention, and Racial and Ethnic Approaches to Community Health (REACH). These programs enable awardees to implement community-level interventions that reduce chronic diseases where people live, learn, work, and play. In FY 2014, CDC funded $94 million to 93 awardees that represent governmental agencies and nongovernmental organizations, including school districts, local governments, hospital and health systems, community-based organizations, public health offices, and American Indian Tribes/Tribal Organizations.
