Community Overview

Olmsted County, Minnesota, is tackling obesity, which is prevalent throughout the community of 144,248 residents. Nearly 27% of adults in Olmsted County are obese. Additionally, 23% of children in Minnesota are overweight or obese. Limited physical activity and poor nutrition choices contribute to these rates. Approximately 70% of Olmsted County adults do not consume recommended amounts of fruits and vegetables, and 14.1% of adults reported no physical activity in the last 30 days.

Community Successes

If healthy options are not available, then healthy living is not possible. With the support of the CPPW initiative, Olmsted County has implemented a variety of changes throughout the community to make healthy living easier.

To decrease the prevalence of obesity, Olmsted County:

- Secured participation of three Olmsted County school districts to incorporate pedestrian and bike education into their physical education curriculum. Teachers received training on the new content and, when fully implemented, this effort will reach approximately 4,600 students.
- Increased the number of farmers’ markets in the county from one to five, increasing access to fresh and local produce for residents and visitors.
- Launched an initiative at the University Center Rochester campus aimed at encouraging more than 10,000 students and staff to make healthy choices at vending machines. This effort includes the placement of healthy eating prompts on more than 50 vending machines. The university plans to expand this healthy food initiative to include campus cafeterias and cafes.
"Wonderful idea! I have made many meals prepared completely with food from the farmers' market and purchased with EBT. I feel great about feeding my family this way!"

- Drafted a Bicycle Master Plan, which will be incorporated into the county’s long-term transportation plan. Informed by focus groups, public input sessions, and the Bicycle-Pedestrian Advisory Committee, this plan includes best practices for creating a more “bicycle-friendly” Olmsted.

- Designed new trail signs in collaboration with the Rochester Park and Recreation Department to make trails easier to navigate and use. Signs have been placed throughout the City of Rochester’s more than 90 miles of trails.

Farmers’ Markets Make Healthy Food More Accessible to Low-income Residents

Olmsted County is increasing low-income residents’ access to affordable, healthy food through collaboration with local farmers’ markets. The county helped establish a new weekday farmers’ market and doubled the number of markets that enable participants in the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) to use Electronic Benefit Transfer (EBT) to purchase fresh produce. The county also helped a farmers’ market develop and promote the Market Bucks program, through which EBT and WIC users receive an additional $5 in “Market Bucks” each time they use their benefits. This incentivizes shopping at the farmers’ market and decreases the price of local fruits and vegetables. Market Bucks have a nearly 100% redemption rate, and EBT sales from May 2011 through July 2011 were more than double the sales for the same months in 2010.
