ABOUT THE COVER

In this month's cover article, "Complaints Associated With Animal Feeding Facilities as Reported to Ohio Local Health Departments, 2006–2008," the authors describe a retrospective survey they conducted to investigate reported odor, nuisance, or health-related complaints about animal feeding facilities in Ohio. Although swine operations generated the most complaints, the authors found that in general, animal feeding facilities were not a major source of complaints, despite their controversial nature and concerns from nearby residents about the health and nuisance implications of these facilities.
