ABOUT THE COVER

In this issue's cover feature, "Norovirus Outbreak at a Wildland Fire Base Camp Ignites Investigation of Restaurant Inspection Policies," the authors describe the investigation of a norovirus outbreak at a wildland fire base camp in Idaho in 2011. The investigation determined that a restaurant was the likely infection source and identified lack of managerial knowledge to protect against foodborne disease one year after the restaurant's opening. The authors also examined state laws by surveying 18 states about existing rules or policies related to postopening inspection requirements and timing. See page 8.
