

Environmental Health

Dedicated to the advancement of the environmental health professional

Volume 77, No. 3 October 2014

ABOUT THE COVER

In this month's cover feature, "Hot Yoga Establishments in Local Communities Serving Pregnant Women: A Pilot Study on the Health Implications of its Practice and Environmental Conditions," the authors studied participants' knowledge, attitudes, and beliefs about prenatal hot yoga. Public health officials and OB/GYNs should be aware that those who engage in prenatal exercise other than traditional yoga are less likely to be willing to receive safety information. Hot yoga practitioners are more likely to trust individuals who have experience with hot yoga other than their public health official or OB/GYN in regards to prenatal hot yoga advice.
