Blood Lead Data

A close-up photograph of a person wearing white nitrile gloves holding a glass test tube filled with a dark red liquid, likely blood. The test tube is tilted, and the liquid is clearly visible. In the background, two more test tubes with similar contents are visible, slightly out of focus. The entire scene is set against a light blue background. A red rectangular border is superimposed over the top portion of the image, containing the text 'Blood Lead Data'.

Architect: F. Eick We_er (sic) Builder: Unknown
This red brick shotgun house is three bays wide under a flat roof with a decorative shaped parapet with white terra-cotta coping. The bays are round arched and decorated with terra-cotta hood molding, with the entrance door recessed within the leftmost bay. The window sills are incorporated into the water table, below which is blonde facing brick and two small basement windows. Below the white terra-cotta cornice is a band of protruding brick headers implying dentils. With the exception of the replacement door and window security bars, this distinctive shotgun house retains a very high degree of historic integrity.

Style: OTHER: Historic Eclecticism
Thematic: Two Family Flat: Shared Side Bay Porch Entrance
Architect: Unknown Builder: Unknown
Rising two stories to a flat roof with shaped parapet, this two-story brick duplex has two bays with the entrances sheltered under a small flat-roofed porch on brick columns. The symmetrical windows sit on limestone sills and have modestly decorative brick patterned lintels. The parapet coping, as well as the cornice, are white terra-cotta. The only visible alteration from the original construction is the replacement of the entrance doors, which does not compromise the ability of this building to convey its distinctive

38. Further Description of Important Features

Built in 1948, Arrow Rock "Colored" School is a simple gable end brick building laid out on an irregular plan. On the exterior, the structure retains much of its original appearance, including the original porch and gable awning with triangular knee brackets and six-over-six windows (five on west side and two flanking entrance door). The interior is divided into rooms as part of a later renovation.
