

Dementia care units

More than one-tenth of nursing homes (14.8%) and residential care communities (12.1%) offered a dementia care unit within a larger facility or community (Figure 20).<sup>28</sup> While another one-tenth of residential care communities (10.1%) served only residents with dementia, few nursing homes (0.4%) did so.

Figure 20. Percent distribution of long-term care services providers, by sector and dementia care unit: United States, 2014

<sup>28</sup> Dementia care units or dementia-only providers were not examined for adult day services centers, home health agencies, or hospices because these topics are more relevant for residential sectors such as nursing homes and residential care communities.