Survey details

The National Sample Survey of Nurse Practitioners (NSSNP) was commissioned by the Health Resources and Services Administration's (HRSA) Bureau of Health Professions (BHP) to help fill the information gap that exists surrounding Nurse Practitioner (NP) education, training, employment, and the extent to which NPs are practicing to the full extent of their education and training. NSSNP data will be used to inform health workforce policy decisions based on current and projected supply and demand for NPs.

To support a methodologically rigorous data collection representing all licensed NPs in the U.S., HRSA obtained listings of all actively licensed NP from each state licensing board. Using the 51 individual lists, a single national sample frame was established utilizing probability matching to help identify NPs with multiple NP licenses. Once all multiply licensed NPs were identified, a sample of NP records was selected from the national sample frame. The national sample included 22,000 NP records allocated (approximately) proportional to the number of licensed NPs in each state.

Data were collected between March 2012 and July 2012 using three waves mailed paper surveys plus a reminder postcard. From this sample of 22,000, 12,923 NPs completed and returned surveys. The response rate was 60.1 percent. Each survey was carefully reviewed for missing or inaccurate data. A stepwise data cleaning process was applied to identify and consistently clean conflicting and out of range data. In addition, upcoding procedures were applied in order to standardize specified responses and other extraneous data.

Sample weights were established to permit the development of national estimates as well as state-level estimates for many of the larger states. The final weight assigned to a participating nurse practitioner may be interpreted as the number of NPs who have a currently active license in at least one state represented by that participating NP. Survey estimates, such as those included through the analytic chapters in this report are obtained by applying the final sample weights to records representing the eligible responding NPs. Corresponding estimates of variability can be obtained through use of 100 jackknife replicate weights developed for this purpose. The weighting factor associated with the Jackknife weights was 1.
