

STD Prevention Science Series

Presented by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Division of STD Prevention and
The American Sexually Transmitted Diseases Association

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Division of STD Prevention and the American Sexually Transmitted Diseases Association have partnered to bring you the latest research and best practices for STD prevention with the STD Prevention Science Series. This quarterly series will bring lectures on cutting edge issues by scientists and program experts of world renown to all persons interested in the prevention of STDs, including HIV.

JANUARY 26, 2017: 1:00 – 2:00PM EST

French Disease to Ipergay: Syphilis networks in the PrEP era by John Schneider, MD, MPH

Dr. Schneider will describe syphilis networks of most at risk populations in the United States and in particular, younger Black men who have sex with men. He will present comparisons of these networks with HIV networks and the implications of co-infection. He will spend a significant amount of time contextualizing both networks within the era of PrEP and describe ongoing and novel network interventions to limit the impact of ongoing domestic syphilis epidemics.

Dr. John Schneider MD, MPH, is an infectious disease specialist and network at the University of Chicago. He is also Director of the University of Chicago Center for HIV Elimination. His NIH and CDC funded research focuses on how social networks can be leveraged to improve the health of populations at risk for HIV and other sexually transmitted infections in resource restricted settings. Clinically, he specializes in HIV prevention and has a specific interest in the provision of high-quality care to young Black men who have sex with men and transgender women.
