

Convening CDC Partners as a Learning Community

The Learning Community is a $7M CDC collaboration effort bringing together 500+ partners funded through the Partnering for Vaccine Equity program— from local community-based organizations to large medical associations and national foundations – to share knowledge and best practices to achieve vaccine equity.

Learning Community Model

Immediate and Long-Term Capacity Building

The Learning Community allows partners to share their expertise, learn from other partners, and access resources, including best practices and ready-to-use communications products. Through group learning, one-on-one coaching with subject matter experts (SMEs), and data-informed technical assistance, the Learning Community will help them address urgent COVID-19 vaccination needs and strengthen their partnerships and capacity to address broader long-standing inequities in adult vaccination.

Program management, collaboration, reporting, and improvement across Learning Community activities and partners

Technical Assistance

Overview

National organizations provide technical assistance to state, local, and community organizations through one-on-one coaching and access to SMEs.

Impact

State, local, and community organizations receive tailored coaching, connections, and lessons learned from national organizations.

Peer-to-Peer & Group Learning

Group Learning Manager [Urban Institute] oversees peer-to-peer and group learning activities and an online collaboration site.

State, local, and community-based organizations build capacity and partnerships through a schedule of virtual webinars, workshops, and office hours.

Materials Management

Materials Hub Manager [CDC Foundation] oversees management of material collection, evaluation, and distribution, as well as a materials hosting platform.

State, local, and community organizations have easily accessible and usable materials to inform and accelerate their work on the ground.

<https://www.cdc.gov/vaccines/health-equity/>

Partnering for
Vaccine Equity

