As of February 28, 2016, there were 28,639 suspected, probable, and confirmed cases of Ebola and 11,316 deaths from Ebola during the 2014 epidemic in West Africa. In comparison, there were 2,427 reported cases and 1,597 deaths in all other known cases and outbreaks of Ebola combined.

- 23% decrease in health services delivery in Sierra Leone
- 881 doctors, nurses, and midwives were infected with Ebola in West Africa
- 24,655 healthcare workers were trained in infection prevention and control in West Africa
- 2,714 additional estimated deaths due to tuberculosis
- 6,818 additional estimated deaths due to malaria
- 513 died because of Ebola
- 1,091 additional estimated deaths due to HIV
- 17,300 children lost one or both parents to Ebola
- 30% decline in childhood vaccination coverage
- 33 weeks of education were lost due to school closures
- 3 new emergency operations centers were established in Guinea, Liberia, and Sierra Leone
- 339,000 people were screened flying out of Guinea, Liberia, and Sierra Leone to prevent the spread of Ebola
- $2.2 billion in GDP was lost in Guinea, Liberia, and Sierra Leone in 2015, threatening not only macroeconomic stability but also food security, human capital development, and private sector growth.